Village's classic bike and car show revs up

Forden Vintage and Classic Show organiser Richard Davys-Jones is looking forward to welcoming exhibitors and visitors CLASSIC motorcycles and cars will pack the fields of a village to raise money for local organisations.

The Forden Vintage and Classic Bike and Car show began back in 2010 as an idea to raise money for the village's primary school.

In its first year it raised £600, and since then that total has leapt up with £8,000 raised for the school and a host of other organisations in and around the village.

This year's eighth annual show will take place at Forden Community Centre on Sunday, with enthusiasts coming from all over the country to see the classic vehicles.

Richard Davys-Jones who came up with the idea is hoping the show can grow even further this year. He said: "Last year we had about 2,000 people visit to see the classic cars and all the other spectacles we have. People come from all over to show their bikes. It started when the Friends of Forden School were raising money, and I pitched the idea of the motorcycle and car show."

"It went from there really, and it has really helped the school, but it isn't just the school it helps, there are a host of organisations who have benefited from it.

"In the past we have had one person come over from Switzerland to the event, and others have come from Nottingham, London and all over really." Up to 200 classic cars will be on show, alongside vehicles such as camper vans and caravans. The show will run from 10am to 4pm, and entry is £5 per adult and children under 16 are free.

AN extension to Oswestry of up to 600 new homes should include community facilities, according to the town's civic society.
Oswestry and District Civic Society says planners should consider an overall approach to the design of new estates, building in public transport links and local facilities.

It has written to Shropshire Council ver plans for up to 600 homes on land off Shrewsbury Road on the southern edge of the town.

Developer, JR Ross, says the planned development will provide much needed homes for Shropshire.

Its masterplan includes homes set around an open green with pedestrian and vehicle links to the town centre, and to the nearby leisure centre and industrial estate.

There are also plans to build a pedestrian bridge over the A5/A483 to connect with a proposed new business park on the other

Castle excavation site is targeted

Members of Oswestry Castle Research Project have been working on site since September 4

THE remains of Oswestry's ancient castle, which are currently the focus of an excavation project, were targeted by vandals in a spray-painting attack.

The Oswestry Castle Research Project has been awarded a £32,300 grant from the Heritage Lottery Fund to research the castle's past.

A team of archaeologists and volunteers have been on site, uncovering the castle remains, since September 4.

But police say the site was targeted by vandals with the attack happening between 3pm on Sep-tember 10 and 9am on Monday last week. Roger Cooper, who is leading the project, said vandals had slashed the tent and sprayed a section of the castle with paint.

"Defacing an ancient monu-ment is a crime in itself," he said. "They've sprayed pink paint on a section of the castle. They also slashed through the tent and completely ruined it. We do take all of the expensive equipment out at night, but it was completely written off and we've had to buy another which is annoying because it is eating into money that could be used for excavation." Mr Cooper said a similar incident happened when they were working on a castle project in 2015. "They took a pick axe and slashed it through the tent so we had to buy another tent then,"

He was told that in 2015 the parish followed advice from Shropshire councillors and produced a professional, risk assessed, road safety submission for inclusion in the roads programme. "It was revisited, updated and submitted but again we were not successful."

The submission asked for safety improvements outside the village primary school and new footway/visibility improvements by the Plough public house. Councillor Nutting urged the council to resubmit for the 2018-19 capital programme, concentrating on the safety issues around the primary school.

Parish councillors pointed to individual problems such as a large pothole by the primary school that had, they said, been "bodged" at least four times but never properly resurfaced. It was again in urgent need of repair.

Chris Edwards, head of infrastructure and communities for Shropshire Council, said the pothole was not a safety defect as determined in the current highway inspec-

"The pothole has had a temporary repair until our contractor can programme a per-manent repair," he said. He said contractors had also been in-structed to repair defects on the five-way roundabout in the middle of the village.

Parish councillors also called for a 30 mile an hour flashing vehicle activated sign for Weston Rhyn and were told that request would need to be submitted through the road safety scheme process.

He's down - Mark needs a hand at the new sport

Roller derby sport offers plenty of ups and downs

Roller derby is growing in popularity and our man MARK ANDREWS has a go at finding his feet

SO, what advice would you give to somebody trying roller derby for the first time?

"Get a good set of pads," says Lau-ren Hamilton.
"When I started, I was falling down every two minutes, I fell down on my face, and I had a bruise that was very big and purple. Other people don't bruise as much as me."

Er right, I think I've got an idea of how

Er right, I think I've got an idea of how this one is going to pan out. Lauren, who is offering me advice as I prepare to step on to the track for the first time, is fit, agile, in her late 20s, and appropriately dressed for sporting activity. And me? Well, I've got a good set of pads. Roller Derby is probably the fastest growing sport you have never heard of, having seen a surge in popularity since featuring in the Hollywood movie Whip It. And the Evolution Roller Derby club, which meets every Thursday at Sundorne Youth Centre in Shrewsbury, has just received a £2,100 boost from Sport England to buy new equipment which England to buy new equipment which will allow it to enter a roller derby league next year. The sport is being rolled out to other parts of Shropshire too, including Lauren, who lives in the Aqueduct area of Telford, only took up the sport in March this year, having been introduced to it by a friend. But despite her early stumbles, she quickly found she was beeker.

The game involves two teams of 10 to 15 members skating in the same disubstitutes. Each team with nominate a "jammer", who scores by lapping their opponents, with the remaining players being "blockers" who try to stop them. "You can cut in to shove them out of the way, that's fine," says club chairman and coach Sarah Evans. "You can make contact up to the shoulder blade, but you can't so below the middle of but you can't go below the middle of the thigh. You can't hit or elbow your opponent, but you can shoulder charge them." No wonder they wear protective

As well as trying to stop the opposing jammers, the blockers also try to help their own jammers overtake their rivals. So as you can imagine, there is a lot of pushing and shoving. Sarah, 28, from Welshpool, took up the sport just over four years ago, at the suggestion of a friend. "I had never heard of it before, and hadn't been on roller skates since I was eight," she says.

"It was just so different from anything I had been offered before. I went to a small school in Mid Wales where I had to do netball or hockey.
"It's mineral this inclusive most."

"It's an incredibly inclusive sport which accepts players from every walk of life, no matter what your size, shape or current fitness level. We have a diverse range of members, from early 20s to early 50s, including students, parents and carers and many more." ents and carers, and many more

The club has been receiving support from Shropshire sports partnership Energize, which helped it lodge the bid with Sport England for the skates, helmets, pad and wrist guards.

Thankfully, I won't be doing any jamming or blocking in my first session, which is just as well, as there is the which is just as well, as there is the small matter of getting from the bench on to track. "Put both hands on your thigh and lift yourself up," says Sarah as I struggle to stand. After falling flat on my face, Sarah suggest it might be wise to crawl on my hands and knees to the odge of the true! the edge of the track.

"Keep away from the wall, don't be tempted to use that to support you," says Sarah, adding that it is important to keep the knees bent so you fall the right way when lose your balance. Need-less to say I do just that, but I'm getting better. I am now falling down like a pro.

"Keep your head up so you can see where you are going, don't look down or you will fall," says Sarah. "It's like driving a car, you need to see where you are going."

After a few false starts I do manage to (almost) complete a full circuit without falling over – although our photographer falling over – although our photographer had to make a few deft moves to avoid me crashing in to him. Privately I'm feeling quite pleased with myself. As the club prepares to enter the league next year, the club is looking for new members, and hopes to use the new equipment to allow presentive new members. ment to allow prospective new members to try the sport out, without having to commit. "As well as our regular Shrewsbury meetings, we've also been taking sessions out and about around other parts of Shropshire in recent months, in-cluding Oswestry, Wem and Baschurch," says Sarah. "We're looking for men and says satall. We le looning for her allow women aged 18 or over to get involved in our expanding club. It's a chance to learn how to roller-skate and have lots of fun at the same time.

Elephants are killed for their ivory and the world loses an elephant every 15 minutes. The latest Great Elephant Census in 2016, estimates that the population of savanna elephants is down 30 per cent – 144,000 elephants have been killed since the last census in 2009.

When I was Secretary of State at DEFRA, I visited Kenya to see for myself the shocking decline in Africa's elephant and rhinoceros populations. On return, I eros populations. On return, I worked closely with the then Foreign Secretary, William Hague, to tackle the problem of international wildlife crime. At over $23 billion per annum, this is the fourth largest source of illegal income for criminals and terrorists. We understood that such as ists. We understood that such an ambitious project required glob-al agreement. We took a world lead and used the extraordinary scope of the UK's international influence to convene the London Conference on the Illegal Wildlife Trade at Lancaster House in 2014. The London Conference was the largest ever of its kind, bringing together 46 countries. It agreed a strategy to prevent poaching: improving enforce-ment, reducing market demand and supporting communities to find viable economic activities. The London Declaration also saw the creation of the Elephant Protection Initiative by five African leaders, calling for domestic ivory markets to close and sup-port for elephant conservation under a common platform.

Internationally, the US do-mestic market closed last summer, with workable, pragmatic exemptions for some antiques. China – the largest market in the world – is committed to act before the end of the year. We saw the first concrete signs of this commitment at the end of March, when the closure of 67 (one-third) of Chinese ivory factories and retail stores was announced. The UK must act now to ensure that we do not fall behind and lose our prominent world leadership on wildlife crime. With the Illegal Wildlife Trade Conference returning to London in 2018, the gaze of the international community will be firmly upon us once again. We must take action to prove to the world that we are willing and able to lead on this issue as we have done before.

We should proceed with our commitment to introduce tighter legislation to close the domestic ivory market with appropriate exemptions covering objects of artistic, cultural and historical significance.

If they all think she has done well you have to question their judgement, or perhaps their motives. Let's face it – her election campaign in an unnecessary election which she called was a disaster. ## Overpaid BBC stars are just not worth our money

WELL we now know where our hardearned cash we pay in television licence fees goes.

The question is not the equality of the pay, but the amount of it. Can it honestly be said that these so-called stars are worth so much more money than our Prime Minister.

I am sure the BBC would find as much talent if the top pay was £200,000, a figure millions can only dream about.

Some of the people paid millions I would not pay in rusty washers. Chris Evans I would not cross the street to see for free and Gary Lineker does not even rate.

There are complaints that only about one in 10 of the higher earners is from an ethnic background, well I would say that is about right for the population of the country.

The fact that the males are paid more than the females also stinks. In fact the BBC I believe is rotten to the core, the whole set up needs changing. D L BARNETT

Traffic chaos on our town roads do need to be sorted out now

I have no idea when Councillor Aspinall forced to use it quite often. Apart from the mobility scooter users driving along the road whilst walking their dogs, children dashing across to the recreation ground or people running out in front of mov-ing cars to get to the shop two seconds quicker, the proliferation of parked cars around the roundahout area means it is usually tight for even one vehicle to pass through. Then there are the drivers who feel it is their right to park around the roundabout if there is no nearer space, and return requests to park elsewhere with a foul-mouthed tirade! It is well known that motorists avoid areas with speed humps as they damage the suspension and wheels of cars even when crossed at crawling pace and then the number of cars turning down and then the number of ears turning down Ascot Way slows the traffic still further. Where is it possible to pick up speed? Given the likelihood of the proposed traffic changes to Middleton Road at the bottom of Ascot Way, that will push traffic still further through local rat runs, with a supposed increase of a further 1,200 cars when the 600 home development is built in the area, I hope Councillor Aspinall will look at representing all local residents, and sort

Peter Webber, the owner of New-town-based Cellpath wants to see statues of Welsh social reformer Robert Owen and fashion designer Laura Ashley placed on roundabouts on the route, to make the construction unique to Newtown.

Mr Webber, whose company supplies products for histopathology and cytology, said discussions on the plans are at an early stage but he is hoping the plans come to fruition. Montgomeryshire MP Glyn Davies backed the plans and said he would like to see the prominent local figures celebrated.

He said: "Peter is full of good ideas and this is one of them

Rat-infested store is hit with £40,000 fine in recycling competition SCHOOL Purille in Parent by Airmog Lance

Report by Aimee Jones

A CONVENIENCE store which had a severe rat infestation has been fined £40,000 for hygiene offences.

First Stop Limited in Broad Street, Welshpool, appeared at Llandrindod Wells Magistrates Court in a prosecution led by Powys County Council's environmental health team.

First Stop pleaded guilty to 10 hygiene offences and asked for three more to be taken into consideration.

The court heard how an environmental health officer from the council visited the premises in November 2016 having received a complaint from a customer who said they'd seen rats in the shop area.

The officer found evidence of a severe rat infestation and said there was gnawed food and food packaging on the shelves, which staff had been aware of. Rat droppings were also found throughout the shop and there were points where the rodents had chewed through the walls and floor.

In a further visit to the premises in May 2017, the inspecting officer found that the display refrigerators containing high-risk food items were not operating at the correct temperature. Six packs of cooked meat were also found being displayed for sale past their use-by

Magistrates fined First Stop £40,000 for the 13 offences and ordered the store to pay £3,000 prosecution costs and a mandatory surcharge of £170.

Vouchers set to be won

SCHOOL pupils in Powys have the chance to win vouchers for their school if they can recycle as many batteries as they can.

Powys County Council is running a free battery recycling competition and is urging schools to sign up to be in with a chance of winning vouchers.

The school which collects the most batteries per pupil could win a share of £500 worth of Amazon vouchers.

The competition is being sponsored by the European Recycling Platform, the council's compliance scheme for waste electrical and electronic equipment and batteries.

Schools who sign up will be provided with a free battery box and will compete over the autumn term to collect as many domestic batteries as possible. This includes the standard AA and AAA nickel cadmium batteries, button cell batteries, power packs from tools and mobile phone and laptop batteries.

Councillor Phyl Davies, the coun-Councillor Phyl Davies, the council's cabinet member for waste and recycling, said: "This is a fantastic competition I would urge every school in the county to take part.
"Batteries are made from recyclable metals including lead, cadmium, zinc, lithium and morrows. Each better."

metals including lead, cadmium, zinc, lithium and mercury. Each battery collected by a school can be re-melted and used to make new batteries rather than going to landfill where they could cause soil and water pollution."

Excellent start to school year at Moreton §

Students at Moreton Hall School have achieved outstanding exam results

Moreton Hall is celebrating an excellent start to the new school year.

Moreton Hall has been named as one of the Telegraph's "Top Movers" following outstanding A-level and GCSE results.

This impressive accolade follows another vintage year of A-level results for Moreton Hall and certainly sets the tone for the year to come! As one of the country's leading independent schools, Moreton Hall has risen over 100 places to be positioned in the top 100 schools for 2017 A-level results.

Some 53 per cent of grades were awarded A* or A with a third of candidates achieving straight A* or A grades in all their subjects. Exceptional pastoral care, detailed knowledge of individual students and unlimited extra support and help are undoubtedly key factors in explaining the school's remarkable success in public examinations.

Tribute

Principal Jonathan Forster was quick to pay tribute to the quality of teaching and learning which has long been the hallmark of the school. Moreton Hall will host an open day on Saturday, Septemb

He said: "We have exceptional teachers and outstanding students, both of whom are prepared to go the extra mile.

"Our aim is quite simple, to enable students to reach their potential. Whether that is achieving a place at Oxbridge, representing their country at lacrosse or utilising the skills honed in Moreton Enterprises to run their own company.

"Our academic results are stellar, but that is only one aspect of the business of education. "A Moreton education is for life!"

As The Tatler Schools Guide remarks: "If you're looking for girl power, you'll find it at Moreton Hall."

Get your home ready for cooler times

With summer having now moved into autumn and winter just around the corner, now is the time to look again at your home's interior

Moody blues, oversized florals and woodland settings are the new season interiors trends to

While the temperature may be dropping as autumn arrives, there's no need to feel the chill indoors. The season's hottest new decor trends are rich with glowing colour, pattern and detail.

At this time of year deep moody blue shades and a focus on texture and luxury come together well.

Clotilde Passalacqua, interior design leader, lkea, said: "Instead of featuring bright and playful colours, this trend pairs rich, dark tones - such as navy and emerald green - with accents of brass and gold, to create an exotic and luxurious look with a touch of opulence.
"Accessorising with succulents and tropical plants is key, as is artwork and patterns that take their cue from nature, and in particular, feature foliage.

Many major home brands have embraced this autumnal luxury look, including Marks & Spencer with its Manhattan collection.

It has a rich palette of inky matte black and brass accents, and is inspired by the opulence of New York's luxury hotels, with details including soft velvets and green marble, mixed with bold monochrome furniture.

Our love affair with nature and the great outdoors continues, and one of the easiest ways to refresh an interior is to take inspiration from the countryside and with the latest Woodland Walk theme

"Woodland Walk captures the tones and textures of an autumnal country walk, creating a cosy living space with warm aubergine and mulberry colours, used across chunky knits and patterned textiles," says Andrew Tanner

Many major home brands have embraced the autumnal luxury look to provide comfort and elegance

design manager for home and seasonal, Sainsbury's Home

"These shades pop against mustard and duck egg blue tones, seen on ceramics and home accessories, complementing this classic look. There are figures in a rich, brass metallic finish, and we have a fragrance of Applewood and Clove - a woody, spicy scent - all finishing touches for an interior which is cosy, nurturing Another current theme is Moody Blooms. A berry-hued palette of blueberry, cherry, deep plum and purple, paired with designs featuring lush blooms, is a chic, seasonal way to interpret the fashionably botanical trend. "This season our collections draw inspiration from the humble tulip bulb that became more precious than gold and five times more expensive than a house," explained Tricia Guild from Designers

We all love a cosy and stylish home, especially as we move into autumn and on towards winter.

Getting you home ready for the colder months need not be a huge headache.

For example wooden floors are a wonderful addition to any home, whatever its style or period, and are a practical alternative to carpet, especially in hallways and reception rooms. If your home has original floorboards, sanding and varnishing or staining them should add value and create a lovely, hardwearing feature.

Radiators are, of course, very practical, but they also have a decorative function that's often overlooked. Modern column radiators work well in most interiors because they're a contemporary take on a classic design. Almost everyone loves a real fire, but open fires are generally only around 15 per cent to 30 per cent efficient, as most of the heat goes up the chimney. Wood-burning stoves are a better investment, as they're much more efficient and have other advantages, such as keeping smoke and sparks contained. Wood burners come in many different styles, from traditional to contemporary, and are a great addition to your home's central heating when it's really cold. Great looking oak furniture also adds style to your home.

With the philosophy that life is too short to spend time traipsing round a retail park firmly in place, The Oak Furniture Shops on Bailey Street in Oswestry and 2 High Street in Welshpool – opposite the Town Hall – offer an extensive range of furniture for living, dining and bedroom. From oak TV units to a comprehensive range of tables and furniture on display, these are the perfect shops to pop in and have a look round when looking to either replace tired pieces of furniture, create new storage or just to cheer up a room with a new lamp or a statement piece

Stylish flooring not only adds a modern look to your home but can also add extra comfort

There is also a carefully chosen range of upholstery for the home with some lovely tub chairs and comfy armchairs that are just perfect for those long winter evenings by the fire, and luxurious corner and three piece suites in a range of fabrics. A fabulous choice of beds in solid oak, a selection of Ottoman and metal beds, as well as divan bases in a choice of fabrics and a wide selection of mattresses will certainly add a touch of luxury and comfort to any bedroom. ## £25,000 pledge for heritage bid

A BID by Oswestry to be named a Heritage Action Zone has been given a £25,000 boost.

Oswestry Town Council is backing a bid to Historic England for the town to be named as one of the UK's heritage zones.

If successful, the zone could lever in further money to help improve town centre buildings.

The council voted on Wednesday last week to give the money over three years if the bid is successful. Over that time, the aim would be to help the regeneration of the town centre as Oswestry looks to expand with houses and a business park on the horizon, Mayor Vince Hunt said.

Canalside event is a real cracker

Report by Sue Austin

VISITORS to a canalside festival stepped back in time with horse power, ancient crafts and vintage musical instruments among the stars of the show.

The Maesbury Canal Fayre was held in the grounds of Canal Cenreal along side the Montgomery Canal south of Oswestry.

As well as promoting the canal the weekend raised funds for the Friends of Montgomery Canal Trust.

There was a nostalgic note to the weekend.

Music was provided by the Shropshire Boatmen and also from the Hurdy Gurdy man who raises money for charity taking his old time musical instrument to shows across the country. Children and adults alike were fas-cinated by the instrument, that works by running special hole punched cards through it.

The Shropshire Boatmen are a shanty crew who sing to keep alive the connection between Britain's inland waterways and the international sea faring trade.

faring trade.

The group also supports the Shropshire based Saturn Flyboat a horse drawn boat that was also at the canal fayre along with its popular heavy horse, Cracker. # Masterclass and talk from grenowned equestrian artist Renowned equestrian artist Mary Herbert will hold a masterclass and public talk as part of a week-long art exhibition by Shrewsbury High School.

From September 28 to October 5, an exhibition of artwork from some of Shrewsbury High School's talented artists, past and present, as well as work produced by pupils across Shropshire in special art masterclasses, will take place in the exhibition hall at Shrewsbury Museum & Art Gallery.

The exhibition is free to the public and not only features GCSE, A-level and alumnae artwork, but will also exhibit work produced at workshops and masterclasses throughout the week from pupils from schools across the county.

Scholars

Mark Warner, head of art at Shrewsbury High School, will host a scholars' masterclass for high school art scholars and their work will then be entered into the main exhibition.

Renowned equine artist Mary Herbert from the Society of Equestrian Artists will run a bespoke art workshop on September 30, free of charge, for GCSE art students from across Shropshire.

Work produced at this workshop will then be on display in the exhibition hall until October 5.

Mary, who specialises in pastel paintings of animals, will follow this masterclass with a talk and showcase of her equestrian art.

Opportunity

Running from 2pm to 2.45pm, the talk is free to the public and is a wonderful opportunity to hear about Mary's career as a professional artist, working on portrait commissions and exhibiting around the UK and to see some of her beautiful paintings. Stay and enjoy Mary's exhibition until

treatment 'not quick enough' THE trust which controls Shropshire's They show 28 per cent of patients that

two main hospitals failed to give sepsis patients antibiotics quick enough, figures

They show 28 per cent of patients that needed antibiotics for sepsis were not getting them within an hour. However, health bosses have said the figures relate to a period up to March this year and great improvements have been made regarding sepsis in the past six months.

Sepsis is a rare but serious complication of an infection. Without prompt treatment, it can lead to multiple organ failure and death.

Dr Edwin Borman, medical director

Dr Edwin Borman, medical director at The Shrewsbury and Telford Hospital NHS Trust (SaTH), said: "At SaTH, we have been working to improve care for patients who suffer sepsis by using techniques learned from the Virginia Mason Institute (VMI) in Seattle.
"Many NHS organisations have challenges managing sepsis, but we identified that it was important to address them within our trust. "We have made changes to all elements of the sepsis pathway, including reducing the time taken to deliver the sepsis bundle from five hours to under 30 minutes."

The report, entitled Data on Written Complaints in the NHS, 2016/17, shows numbers of complaints about both primary and secondary care.

It shows a 9.7 per cent increase in written complaints to GP and dental practices compared with the previous year.
In 2016/17, there were 90,600 pri-

AMBULANCE response times in Shropshire are hitting targets in most areas – but are still below average for the most serious cases, it

Crisis meeting in the capital over poor A&E performance

Report by Amy Downward

HEALTH bosses have met NHS managers about concerns that the county's A&E performance is among the worst in the country.

Representatives from Shropshire's health groups, including Shrewsbury and Telford Hospital NHS Trust, and Shropshire and Telford & Wrekin clinical commissioning groups, attended the meeting with senior NHS officials in London on Monday.

They were summoned amid concern over growing waiting times and staffing problems. Speaking ahead of the meeting, Jenny Fullard, senior communications and engagement man-ager for Shropshire CCG, said: "Local health and social care partners are working closely together to mitigate the workforce challenges together to mitigate the workforce challenges that we know impact on our A&E delivery times. As part of our winter plans we will be commissioning a range of support to help reduce pressure on our hospitals and reduce delays for patients waiting to be discharged. Debbie Kadum, chief operating officer at SATH, admitted the trust is facing difficulties but said staff are focussed on providing the best care possible.

She said: "It is no secret that our emergency departments are under pressure. In addition to increasing patient numbers, this is due mainly to an insufficient number of consultants and middle grade doctors in our emergency de-partments. Maternity service staff 'not happy' says review

A number of protests have been held around the county, including this one in Ludlow, at the closure of maternity units

STAFF in the county's maternity services are feeling "under pressure", the first stage of a review has revealed.

Dr Jessica Sokolov said that interviews had revealed the staff were "not happy with the situation", as the future of the county's midwife-led units (MLU) is reviewed.

Dr Sokolov was speaking at a meeting of Shropshire Clinical Commissioning Group's board, where she said that about 200 mem-bers of staff had been interviewed as part of a SaTH took a decision to close MLUs in Bridgnorth, Ludlow, and Oswestry for six months from July 1, which sparked protests in the county.

All three units had faced closures at short An three due to staff being moved to cover shifts at Princess Royal Hospital's consultant-led maternity unit to ensure it was safely staffed.

The future of the units is now subject to a review being conducted by Shropshire and Telford & Wrekin Clinical Commissioning Groups.

Dr Sokolov said the review was looking at the financial and clinical sustainability of the service. She said: "There is unlikely to be any reconfiguration of the service that means ma-ternity services are truly sustainable."

She added that staff were being moved to the consultant-led unit because it deals with more women giving birth. She said: "We can-not do that and keep the system as it is."

Speaking ahead of the decision to close the units for six months Deirdre Fowler, director of nursing, midwifery and quality at SaTH, said the consultant-led unit sees about 85 per cent of births in the county.

Future Fit: Leader does not support preferred option

THE leader of Telford & Wrekin Council says it will not support the selection of Shrews-bury's hospital as the main base for the coun-

As part of the Future Fit process to reorganise Shropshire's major hospital services a joint committee has recommended plans to downgrade A&E services at Telford's Princess Royal Hospital in favour of one emergency and trauma department based in Shrewsbury.

Proposals include a new emergency centre and women and children's services at Royal

Shrewsbury Hospital, while planned surgery onthopaedics and specialist centres would be based in Telford. But a notice of motion has been put forward for Telford & Wrekin's full council meeting, where the council's Labour leader Shaun Davies says it will continue to fight for services to remain at the Princess Royal Hospital.

He says the council will continue to support Telford as the preferred option for the emergency centre and specialist women and children's care.

The notice says: "The council is disappointed by the decision of the clinical com-missioning groups to select a preferred option - of the emergency centre and women and children's centre at Shrewsbury to go out to

"This would see a downgrading of our A&E department at the PRH to an urgent care centre. It would also move the current consultant-led in-patient services available at our 'state of the art' women & children's centre in Telford to Shrewsbury.

"This council opposes the selection of this as the preferred option as it makes no sense to move the women & children's centre. It was built just three years ago, at a cost of £28m precisely because SATH identified a clinical need for Telford – that clinical need has not changed and will not change in the future.

"The preferred option is also the most costly and could limit further investment in community health services – keeping care closer to home and people out of hospital for as long as possible."

Many landlords 'unaware' of plan to ban lettings fee

Over a quarter of landlords are unaware of the proposed lettings fee ban in England that could entirely shift their income models, and potentially increase costs to tenants, new research has found.

Announced in last year's Autumn Statement, reiterated in the Queen's speech in June, and discussed in Westminster Hall recently, the ban will mean tenants in England will no longer have to pay anything other than rent and a refundable deposit. Other charges will need to be picked up by landlords.

The research by property management platform No Agent found that not only were 31 per cent of landlords surveyed completely unaware of the bill, 14 per cent were only somewhat aware. A closer look at the figures shows that nearly half of those unaware of the ban live in London where stamp duty taxes on second homes have restricted the number of properties bought by landlords, and already led to significant rent increases.

The firm says it is worrying that more than half of the landlords surveyed believe the ban will result in letting agents passing fees on to landlords, who will in turn be forced to increase rents to avoid losses.

Housing Minister Alok Sharma, however, argued in the Westminster debate that evidence from Scotland's recent fees ban shows it won't have the negative consequences people have suggested it would.

The survey also found that 35 per cent of landlords agree with the Government's argument that the ban will force agents to become more competitive and provide better service for landlords. However, 46 per cent felt that the deposit cap of one month's rent, which was included in the initial consultation but was agreed would be exempt from the ban, would make them less likely to rent properties to tenants with a poor credit history as they wouldn't have been able to ask for a higher deposit to mitigate the risk of financial loss.

Some 37.7 per cent of landlords agreed that if the deposit was capped at one month's rent they would be less likely rent to tenants with pets or with children as they couldn't have asked for a higher deposit to mitigate the risk of property damage.

Overall the majority of landlords, some 57.38 per cent, said that they think that a cap on letting fees for tenants will work better than an outright ban. "It is time to bring the rental sector into the current day and remove the inefficiencies it has been plagued with for so many years, and this bill marks the beginning of this change," said Calum Brannan, chief executive officer of No Agent.

"It's worrying to see the awareness of the proposed tenant fee ban amongst landlords is so low, particularly given how much of an impact this will have on their current business models. More needs to be done by the Government to ensure this vital group know what is to come into effect in 2018," he added.

Watchdog proposes mortgages that last beyond retirement

Mortgages lasting into retirement, paid on an interest-only basis, could be reintroduced to the UK under proposals outlined by the country's financial watchdoo.

In a consultation document, the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) says that these kind of home loans could be a cheaper alternative for older home owners but it is unlikely to sanction a return to loans with compound interest over many years which can hugely inflate the cost.

Instead it is proposing a 'lifetime' mortgage that would offer more choice

It has been prompted to consider the move due to an increase in borrowers selling their homes or looking at more expensive equity deals.

Pensioners

The consultation document says the new interest-only loan would allow pensioners who cannot afford to clear the capital on their current mortgage to continue with the loan with interest paid on a monthly basis with the loan being repaid on death or move to residential care.

"Retirement interest-only mortgages have significantly different risks compared to lifetime mortgages.

"In particular, they do not feature the rollup of interest, meaning that consumers are not at risk of rapid equity erosion and the subsequent reduction of funds available for a bequest," the consultation says.

The FCA pointed out that the home owner must still be able to afford the ongoing interest payments, but ultimately the loan is repaid through the sale of the property.

"We do consider that there are some risks associated with lending with no fixed term and we are proposing to add a small number of additional requirements for the sale of these loans," the consultation paper adds. The idea has been widely welcomed in the industry.

"It will widen the choice for consumers quite considerably because there are some lenders who would like to offer this product at the moment but don't feel they can.

"Older borrowers are currently restricted to equity release, or a small number of lenders who are unlikely to offer them the best rates," said Ray Boulger, a mortgage analyst at John Charcol Charlie Blagbrough, policy officer at the Building Societies Association, pointed out that the important thing is that the proposal recognised that these mortgages would be different from lifetime mortgages as they do not lead to housing equity being eroded.

"This proposal to take retirement interest only mortgages out of the lifetime mortgage definition is a welcome move from the FCA.

"For some customers, sale of the property on death or moving into residential care may well be an appropriate capital repayment vehicle," he explained.

"If they have sufficient retirement income to meet affordability from a pension, rental properties or other sources to service the interest on the mortgage rather than rolling it up, then this product offers a great solution," he pointed out.

"Currently a couple of building societies offer these mortgages. If this change leads to more such products on the market, providing consumers with greater choice in their retirement years, then that can only be a good thind." he added.

Tenants fear they will never get on property ladder

Almost a third of UK tenants feel they will never own their own home.

Almost a third of people renting a property in the UK cannot imagine ever owning their own home, a new study has found, with many worried about rent rises.

Overall 31 per cent think they will not be able to buy and 21 per cent think that the removal of mortgage interest tax relief on buy to let properties, which came into force in April 2017, will reduce the supply of rented properties in their area.

Concerned

Some of the tenants surveyed were also concerned that they will face rent hikes as buy to let landlords pass on the higher costs and six per cent said that their landlord had already or will increase the rent as a direct result of the tax changes.

Affordability and access to mortgage loans were key reasons why many Brits rent, the research report from CoCompare Mortgages point out and half of the tenants surveyed live in rented accommodation because they can't afford to buy their own home.

Some 11 per cent were renting because they were currently unable to obtain a mortgage and 14 per cent of those renting were doing so out of preference. The survey also looked at the profiles of people in rented accommodation, it found that 57 per cent were women, 43 per cent men, 39 per cent were single households, 28 per cent were families with children and 23 per cent were couples. One in 10 share their home with flat or housemates.

"Our research reveals that half of all tenants are in rental accommodation because they can't afford to buy their own home.

"It now looks like many have given up all hope of ever owning a home and, for some, the changes to buy-to-let regulations are likely to make renting more h expensive. In turn, that makes saving for a mortgage even harder," said Matt Sanders from GoCompare

"April saw profound changes to the taxation of buyto-let properties which will reduce landlords' profits and our survey suggests that there is a real concern among tenants that to protect their profits, over time some landlords will increase rents while others may sell up, reducing the stock of available private rented homes," he added.

WORLD-RECORD breaking runner Amy

Amy, originally from West Felton near Oswestry, is setting out to run 400 miles across and around the Balearic Islands, iust off eastern Spain.

She rose to fame in 2014 after completing 53 marathons in 53 consecutive days and breaking the world record.

In 2015 she ran from Oswestry to London and then in 2016, she ran 520 miles on a treadmill in seven days. However this time she is just running for the love of the sport.

She said: "I think the reason I am so excited about this challenge is because I have started thinking more about why I originally started running.

"I started running to feel good, to have time to think, to enjoy running and the time to think, to enjoy running and the scenery I was running in, to inspire others and to get outside.

"So this time I am running to enjoy the beautiful scenery, to have fun and to explore new places I have never been before. I am not running for the times or records."

Starting in Formentera, Amy will run the length of the island from bottom to top, then around the whole of Ibiza, across Mallorca then finally around Menorca.

She added: "I am so lucky to have such wonderful people around me that always help and support me but this time it will be down to me, and in equal measures I am excited and nervous."

Ellesmere Primary School's Ollie Coburn and Rosie Allen learn about farm safety from Maesbury farmer Malcolm Roberts and Meir Ellis from NFU Mutual

Report by Sue Austin

MORE than 400 children have learned valuable life lessons at an event looking at everything from road safety to cyber security.

The Park Hall Showground near

Oswestry was transformed for the four-day, Lifeline event, run by the Rotary Club of Oswestry.

Agencies and organisations built dif-ferent scenarios that children were taken through to show them how easy it is to get into danger and how to keep themselves safe.

Those taking part included a special road and scale safety team, the fire safety team and cycle safety team, the fire service, Coastguard, National Farmers' Union, St John Ambulance, local police and Union, St John Ambulance, local police and British Transport Police.

Rotarian, David Gordon, said the children, all in their last year in primary school, looked at safety on the farm, near the railway and on the water. Stranger danger and drugs were also covered as well as basic first aid.

"A few years ago we were contacted by a school who said that one of the girls who came to Lifeline had been with her grandma when the lady collapsed. She remembered what she had learnt and was able to put her into the recovery position while waiting for help to arrive," he said. Rotarian volunteers run scenarios on bullying and internet safety.

"The internet safety area was only launched a few years ago, we are constantly adapting to changing dangers in society," Mr Gordon said.

GETTING that perfect sunrise picture needs the right light, a bit of luck - and a really early start.

So Mike Hayward leaves those ones to

"John does the early ones where you get up at 3.30am and go up a hill somewhere. I'm too old. I was 70 two weeks ago. And then there's the stuff he has to carry around with him. His backpack weighs two stone. If I had that on I would fall over backwards," said Mike.

Their photographic teamwork has now reached fruition with a book of stunning images taken across the county, called A Year In Shropshire.

"We've been doing these pictures of Shropshire for some time, me in particular. John has been doing it for four years, and I've been doing it all my life really. It's a curse. You can't stop once you start," said Mike, who has a background in press photography.

Together the pair run the Shropshire and Beyond photographic website library, which has thousands of images, and it led to them getting the idea for this, their first book.

years ago.

"We have tried to spread the book over the whole county. There are a lot of books which concentrate on the south of the county, but we have places like Ellesmere and Whitchurch."

"John uses Nikon equipment, in particular a long lens, which is how you get pictures like the Shrewsbury skyline which was taken from Haughmond Hill, quite a long way off. I use Fuji cameras which are much lighter and smaller."

All the pictures were taken digitally.

John, who is 31, started doing photography with his dad in March 2012. Before that, he says, he did some mind-numbing office jobs.

Report by Aimee Jones

AN informal reception for 60 guests at the Sweeney Hall Hotel, near Oswestry, celebrated the success of this year's Whitting-ton Music Festival.

The High Sheriff of Shropshire Charles Lillis

The High Sheriff of Shropshire Charles Lillis mingled with the festival's sponsors, trustees, friends and volunteers and spoke, acknowledging the contribution of the week-long concert series to the area's artistic and economic life.

Beethoven in the Borders brought 15 world-class musicians to the village and resulted in six packed chamber music concerts, an outdoor recital in the woods of Chirk Castle, a webcast on Astro Radio, as well as workshops in schools and rehearsals and a performance with young musicians.

Artistic director James Barralet has already begun to plan 2018's celebration of British chamber music, and has successfully enlisted the involvement of the Elias Quartet again, along with other international artists yet to be confirmed.

The Festival Trust is recruiting some new trustees who will help the festival secure and enhance its future, and there are initiatives in the pipeline we shall report on later in the year.

Organisers say the main task now is to pull together a sixth festival as professional and successful as the five enjoyed so far and to that end the task of applying for funding begins. The festival depends on grants for almost 50 per cent of its funding each year.

e fancied doing something when he was planning his autumn tour for 2017. So Mark Watson decided to take the most contrary approach possible. He named his tour MW and only agreed to visit towns and cities where either the place or the venue began with one of those consonants. So while Mawnan Smith, Much Wenlock (double points an M and a W) and Middle Wallop were in, Stafford, Lichfield and other non-MW towns were out.

The novel approach was intended not just to give Watson a talking point – and that, it surely does. It was also designed so that he'd visit off-the-beaten track towns – he's surely never played Westbury-on-Trym before – ahead of a return to a tried and tested path next year.

Happily, the Mac, at Birmingham, gave him the opportunity to visit the Second City and Mark will be in own on October 6.

He's enjoyed mixing it up and visiting new venues. "It's hard to get round all the places you want to go to when you book a tour. No matter where you go, people will tell us we didn't go to the right place. So we were thinking of a way to whittle it down. As a joke, we had

"So the beginning of the joke was that we only played places that began with M or W. Gradually we started to gather places together and realised that there were enough to do a tour. It's quite a nice schedule of places I haven't been to before.

ALPHABET

MW will, therefore, ruminate on Mark's unique approach to touring. But fans can expect a little more than Watson's alphabet soup. And visiting new venues and new towns means he's more likely to improvise than if he's returning to favourite haunts.

"There's certain material I'll do and have confidence in. But it's much more challenging in a new town; it certainly puts you on your mettle. But that's no bad thing. It provides you with more of a chance to interact with the audience because you're learning on the spot." Mark will dwell on the need for people to understand one another and empathy on his present tour. The material has gone down well and Mark's enjoying his time on the road, with shows through to February. Bigger things lie ahead.

"One of the reasons why I like the MW thing is that it's a rogue tour between bigger tours. If you do 80 or 90 shows, there are some bits, some chunks, that you get a little sick of. It's impossible not to. And I think the moment I feel that, the audience can tell because the freshness goes. So this set of shows are special because that can't happen.

"I like having enough of a script to never completely run out of material, but at the same time I will go off piste as often as I can, especially if there's interesting stuff in the audience. Sometimes I'll be asking the audience to write down things that I can mess around with. I tend to see it as a good thing if I can go off piste because I know I can get it back. As I get more experienced, I get better at steering the show.

"Years ago I did an interview with Eddie Izzard when I was doing work experience as a young 'un. He talked about a gig being like a motorway journey, you can go straight on but it's more interesting to go off on the little side roads. As long as you take it from one place to another, in between you can do as you like.'

Mark is a happy tourer. He used to be ruthless about getting home after a show If all I did was write books I'd be bored – I

Rugby star is guest speaker

The Game & Wildlife Conservation Trust Cymru has announced that former Welsh rugby union player Sir Gareth Edwards will be the guest speaker at its annual dinner and auction in North Wales this November. The dinner and auction will be held at the St George's Hotel, on the Promenade at Llandudno, on November 29, where Sir Gareth will entertain the audience with tales of his countryside pursuits and his celebrated sporting career. Sir Gareth has been described as one of the greatest players of all time in world rugby. A keen shooting and fishing man, he is passionate about the countryside and its importance to Wales, and is keen to encourage more people to become involved in its conservation. Will Richards, chairman of the GWCT North Wales committee, said, "We are delighted that Sir Gareth will join us at our fundraising dinner as our guest speaker. It will be a fantastic opportunity to hear him speak in North Wales and at the same time raise the profile of the GWCT and show its very serious commitment to . Wales." GWCT Cymru was launched at this year's Royal Welsh Show and aims to highlight the importance of shooting and conservation in Wales. It is hoped that the dinner and auction will raise awareness of the trust's activities and the importance of its conservation work in Wales. For details on GWCT North. # tistoric theatre to wide variety c ICKETS to a host of topdrawer shows at an historic theatre are now available ranging from classics of the stage to twists on modern classics.

Wolverhampton's Grand Theatre has released tickets for a variety of shows, including the return of Willy Russell's Blood Brothers, which will take over the theatre for a six-evening stint next April.

The classic drama is one of a number of new shows announced, including a new production from Black Country comedy group The Fizzogs, who will be bringing Freezin', their take on Disney classic Frozen, to life.

The Fizzogs, who shot to fame in 2014 after a video of their dancing grannies' routine went viral, will perform at the Grand on November 16, the night after Katie Markham takes the songs of Adele to the city as part of the Someone Like You – The Adele Songbook show.

Katie was hand-picked by Adele herself on Graham Norton's BBC Adele Special in 2015 to take on the role of the multi-million-selling singer for a stage production and has not looked back since.

She will be performing hits from the record-breaking albums 19, 21 and 25 on November 16.

Tickets are on sale for a special Afternoon with Christopher Biggins show, hosted by BBC Midlands Today's Nick Owen, taking place on October 27.

Fans will be able to join in with a talk on the career of the 68-year-old actor, who has appeared in programmes including Porridge, Some Mothers Do 'Ave 'Em and Surprise Surprise in what is a unique show for the theatre.

The rest of the shows will be taking place next year, including an evening with Buddy Holly and The Cricketers with The Rock and Roll Orchestra.

The show has wowed audiences across the globe from Cardiff to California in recent years and will return to Wolverhampton on March 7.

After surpassing 10,000 shows a long time ago, Blood Brothers is still going strong and the show dubbed the Standing Ovation Musical for its ability to invariably get crowds on their feet at the end of the evening returns returns to the city on April 16, running through to April 21. Bringing the new series of shows to a close is Beautiful

- The Carole King Musical, which tells the inspiring true story of King's remarkable rise to stardom.

It goes from her being, from being part of a hit songwriting team with her husband Gerry Goffin, to her relationship with fellow writers and best friends Cynthia Weil and Barry Mann, to becoming one of the most successful solo acts in popular music history. Beautiful will be at Wolverhampton Grand from June 12 to 16.

A WILDLIFE show will be coming to Mid Wales. The Wildlife Road Trip will see natural history broadcasters Martin Hughes-Games and Iolo Williams team up. # Focus RS is limited ed

contact Furrows FordStore today to reserve yours, we don't think they'll be hanging around for long!

A limited production run of 500 units has been planned from late October to December 2017. Allocation is very limited to FordStores across the country including Furrows FordStore.

There is no customer waiting list, orders will just be fulfilled on a first come, first served basis

Features include the Quaife mechanical limited-slip differential Developed by Ford Performance, the Focus RS Edition uses a Quaife LSD on its front axle. This further improves

The mechanical LSD limits the engine torque delivered to a wheel that has reduction traction on the road surafce, and redistributes torques to the wheel with more traction to counteract the onset of wheel spin.

Performance

By controlling the torque delivered to each front wheel, the Focus RS Edition's Quaife LSD enables drivers to more fully exploit the 350PS 2.3-litre EcoBoost engine's power in high performance driving situations, and seamlessly integrates with Focus RS driving technologies.

Other features include:

- Matt-black foil roof treatment
- New black cast-alloy wheels with blue painted Brembo branded brake callipers

  Matt-black painted door mirrors
- and rear spoiler

  Partial leather Recaro shell seats
- in ebony and blue two-tone
- Carbon fibre interior trim parts. ncluding door grab handle and handbrake lever.
- RS Luxury Pack privacy glass, rear parking sensors, power-fold door mirrors, cruise control with speed limiter and Ford KeyFree System.
- Heated steering wheel
- Active City Stop.

Irip to remember in a stallion of the road

We know other countries by a cartload of cliches - so America are loud, probably flamboyantly dressed and certainly a little on the large side, writes lan Donaldson.

If that's true about its people (some of the time anyway), the cars from the other side of the pond certainly share those traits. And not always in a bad way.

Which brings us neatly to the car on test today, the latest version of a true American icon and only now available in this sixth generation form with right hand drive.

Ford's Mustang shook up the car world in 1965 by combining a big engine, handsome lines and a relatively modest price in a way that had never been attempted before.

It succeeded beyond the wildest dreams of its creators and stands here today looking fresh and arrestingly handsome and dripping with styling clues stretching back to that game changing original.

The big engine is still there, with more than 400 horses from a rumbling V8 that stays docile as a purring tiger until you poke it with a sharp stick, when it heads for the horizon with the sort of conviction only an excess of power can provide

For £4.350 less you can take an alternative route to modern-day

This new Mustang is powerful and handsome. It is also big.

Mustang heaven with a 2.3-litre EcoBoost engine with four cylinders and 313bhp; actually still quick (145mph and 5.8sec to 62mph) but missing a chunk of Mustang authenticity.

So, this new 'stang is powerful and handsome. It is also big; what's more of a surprise is the modesty of the price Ford is asking for its icon.

You can have a 5.0-litre version on your drive for £38,095, handily below the forty grand line that tips you into extra road tax territory, although that big, thirsty engine's tailpipe emissions mean a hefty £2,000 first

A well-equipped bargain too, with superbly comfortable front seats (and enough room in the rear for growing teenagers), dual zone air con, rear view camera, expensive Brembo front brakes, limited slip differential and big 19ins alloy

And you'll be smiling at the recollection of that noise for weeks tel: 0800 917 4622

Revolutionary regeneration of Micra

By Sharon Walters

Nissan described the latest Micra as 'revolutionary' at launch earlier this year. And well it might have. It had to be because although this is the fifth one all the previous incarnations were pretty underwhelming.

But today's Micra is a world apart.

You don't need to get inside a new Micra to witness the 'revolution'. It now has dramatic contours and splashes of colour outside and in that make you notice this car in a very good way. Along with the personalisation options to the hatchback

In fact one in four buvers of the car are choosing to enhance the car's design with additional exterior and interior parts. according to Nissan dealers.

Customer research amongst buyers of the latest Micra reveals that 60% are attracted by the dynamic and expressive styling of the car. This is the number one purchase reason for the new Micra. So Nissan saw the light that so many other manufacturers have been following for some time!

Nissan offers more than 100 combinations available, for both the exterior and interior of the Micra and in a variety of vibrant colours.

My test car was a wonderful combination of blues which certainly did attract admiring

Those stand-out looks include concealed handles for the rear doors which gives it a coupe-like feel but with plenty of space in the rear. There's a big, deep boot and you can seat three fairly comfortably in the rear.

The cabin is high-quality with two-tone softtouch materials standard across the range. It is a very nice place to be.

There's a wide variety of personalisatiion

Technology is strong with a number of 'in-control' features – the sort usually associated with more expensive models now available for the first time. Not only are they new to the Micra, they're new to the segment. These include Intelligent Lane Intervention, a safety system which gently corrects the Micra back on to the right path should it be required.

You also get Nissan's acclaimed Intelligent Around View Monitor camera system – as seen on the Qashqai and Juke crossovers on the Micra for the first time.

For music fans like me, a highlight is the optional BOSE Personal audio system. Unique to the B-hatchback segment, advanced speakers built into the driver's head rest put the driver at the heart of the listening

As for the drive it is also so much better agile and with a secure feeling and handling.

The car is available with three engines - two petrol and one diesel - all linked to a fivespeed manual gearbox. Nissan's familiar five grades of Visia, Visia+, Acenta, N-Connecta and Tekna all feature a high level of standard

Nissan's Micra now has dynamic and expressive styling - gone is the rather dull look specification. Entry level model comes in at just under £12,000.

I drove the 0.9i IG-T 90 with a five-speed manual transmission (£16,570 but including smartmetallic paint) which came with oodles of kit - both comfort and safety. And on the safety side this car has been awarded a five-star safety rating in the UK from Euro NCAP, thanks to the standard fitment of intelligent driving technologies in the Safety Assist category of testing together with a bagful of other active and passive measures and equipment. Every new Micra now comes with six airbags as standard, plus seat belt warnings and seat belt height adjustment in the front. The Isofix car child seat fitting system can be used with the new Micra, including in the front passenger seat, for the best possible child protection.

Additional safety features on every Micra include Electronic Stability Program, anti-lock brakes and Hill Start Assist. A speed limiter, automatic headlight sensor, automatic hazard lights and a Tyre Pressure Monitoring System are also fitted

My perky little engine managed well over 60mpg on mixed driving and never felt under pressure either when motorway cruising or taking on winding country lanes

The Micra small family hatch is now ready again to mix it with the best of the opposition out there out there.

Encouraged

"He has encouraged so many local juniors to play cricket and had such a big impact on cricket in Oswestry and Shropshire and he will be sadly missed by all involved in the game.

"My memories of playing for Oswestry with his two sons and my cousins Paul and Mark whilst Mike scored are so very fond."

The batsman, who has been tipped for a late Ashes push by Pears director of cricket Steve Rhodes, is hoping he can one day pull on the full England jersey for Mr Robinson.

draw a blank at University

CARDIFF Met Uni 0 The New Saints 0

THE New Saints were forced to settle for a point after drawing a blank at fellow front runners Cardiff Met University in a goalless, yet entertaining, JD Welsh Premier encounter.

The Saints had their chances to have snatched the spoils, but the finishing product was to prove elusive as honours were shared in this deadlock at the Cyncoed Stadium.

the cyncoed stadium.

The point was enough to take the Saints into third spot, on the same points as the second placed Met, and three points adrift of leaders Llandudno who were 1-0 winners against Barry Town.

The students were up for the battle in front of a fervent crowd, battling tigerishly throughout to thwart their visitors.

Boss Scott Ruscoe felt TNS did enough to come away with the win, but nevertheless took positives win, but we can take a positive from a clean sheet."

The Saints made changes with young defender Ryan Leak coming in for his debut, and wingman Adrian Cieslewicz recalled to the starting line-up along with Wes Fletcher and Aeron Edwards.

They started positively, going close on four minutes when home skipper Bradley Woolridge cleared off the line to deny Blaine Hudson following Jamie Mullan's inswinging free kick

Cieslewicz rattled the base of post on 17 minutes, but the Met also had their moments, Chris Baker heading wide while Adam Roscrow, the league's players of the month, also a couple of good efforts.

NEWTOWN bounced back from their defeat at Barry Town the previous week in fine style by sweeping aside struggling Aberystwyth Town 4-0 at Latham Park. Neil Mitchell put them on course with a sixth minute opener before the Robins turned on the style in the second half to run out convincing winners.

Joe Kenton scored twice on 67 and 74 minutes before Luke Boundford sealed the victory six minutes from time. Defeat saw Aber slip to the foot of the table with just one point from five games.
